Current economic crisis proves need for MHC

by Phil Tom, MHC Board President

Our nation’s current economic crisis has exposed the impact of foreclosures and bad mortgages on families, neighborhoods, and communities across all economic classes. MHC’s mission to engage all potential stakeholders in the task of promoting fair, decent and affordable housing is more important than ever in the public debate to resolve the country’s financial and housing crisis.

Simply building proper housing does not necessarily build a strong, vibrant neighborhood. But when families live in poor quality housing or lose their homes, the economic and social impact on the community or city is devastating. My block club was struck by the nation’s economic problems, when a wonderful caring neighbor lost her home due to foreclosure.

For many years, MHC has presented research and publications that demonstrate the effect of affordable housing issues on the life of our communities. It is imperative that MHC continues to advocate for public policies and practices that support fair, decent, and affordable housing. I am proud of the work of MHC’s board, members and staff. We have stayed true to our founding purpose and mission to make the Louisville Metro community a healthy, vibrant home for all its residents.

In memoriam
Millard Fuller, founder of Habitat for Humanity, passes away

MHC is deeply saddened by the death of Millard Fuller, the visionary whose ideas and tireless work created Habitat for Humanity. Mr. Fuller led Habitat from its founding in 1976 until his separation from the organization and his founding of the Fuller Center for Housing in 2005. He passed away on February 3, following a brief illness. He was 74.

“Millard Fuller was a force of nature who turned a simple idea into an international organization that has helped more than 300,000 families move from deplorable housing into simple, decent homes they helped build and can afford to buy and live in,” said Jonathan Reckford, chief executive officer of Habitat for Humanity International.

His passion will live on thanks to the dedication of the many volunteers, staff and supporters of Habitat, who continue to make it a great organization.

In our last newsletter you may remember reading about our then upcoming community forum entitled An Unequal Practice: How Race Affects Louisville Mortgage Lending. If you were not able to make this event, I am here to tell you that you missed a lively discussion, to say the least! This community forum — held on Thursday, February 19 at Memorial Auditorium — provided space for public conversation on the issue of how race and racism affects Louisville mortgage lending.

We examined the statistic that in Louisville, 42% of middle and upper income African-American borrowers get high cost home loans, while 18% of white borrowers in the same income bracket are sold high cost loans. Panelists spoke about the reasons for this disparate figure, the current lending crisis and offered solutions that their industries could follow to lead us out of this mess. Each panelist’s perspective delivered some clarification of certain aspects of mortgage lending processes. Mortgage vendor greed, lack of sufficient regulation and sound practices, the need for consumer/borrower education and the presence of racism were among the interwoven causes discussed.

It was during the Q&A session that panelists and audience members had a frank conversation uncovering racism as the root of this staggering statistic.

As panelist Ben Carter explained, “Our society’s tendency to see minorities as gullible plus the opportunity to make thousands of dollars by originating a high-cost loan fueled these racially biased lending practices.”

While some speakers kept hitting the point that borrowers need to educate themselves more, others said this response avoided the obvious racism involved in the whole process. The lively discussion proved that this is an issue that touches a diverse group of people and that a continued community conversation is necessary.

We offer sincere appreciation for the dedication and hard work of the planning group which include the following organizations: Fair Housing Coalition, Kentucky Commission on Human Rights, Legal Aid Society, Louisville Metro Human Relations Commission, Multi-County Clients Council, and U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. We would also like to thank our sponsors, PNC Bank and Multi-County Clients Council. And finally, we send our thanks to the following panelists: Adam Hall, Kentucky Mortgage Bankers Association; Lee Harris, Kentucky Real Estate Commission; Ben Carter, Legal Aid Society; Harold Turner, Kentucky Attorney General’s Office; and to our moderator, Carolyn Miller-Cooper, Louisville Metro Human Relations Commission.

MHC Transitions

As you know, MHC deeply values the service of our Board of Directors. In turn, we are always saddened when a member must step down. Morgan Ransdell of Kentucky Commission on Human Rights has been a great addition to the MHC Board of Directors, but due to time conflicts he must resign. He continues to stay deeply involved in committee work and special projects. As we say goodbye to Morgan, we welcome our newest board member, Carolyn Miller-Cooper. Carolyn is the new Director of the Louisville Metro Human Relations Commission where she had been serving as interim director since March of 2008. In addition to promoting unity, understanding and equal opportunity among all people of Louisville Metro, Carolyn will be working with MHC in the fight for obtaining fair and affordable housing for all people of Louisville Metro. Carolyn holds two law degrees, has three years of experience as a private practice attorney, and has worked for the Kentucky Cabinet for Families and Children as well as the Department of Public Advocacy. We look forward to working with Carolyn and we graciously welcome her to the MHC family!

Our new intern, Gina Barbati, from the University of Louisville, is an undergraduate student majoring in Women and Gender Studies with a minor in Economics. Her degree requirements include working as an intern in a community based organization and she picked us! With little experience in the non-profit sector, Gina sees this opportunity as one to learn about the dedication and change pursued by non-profit organizations and their staff and supporters. She looks forward to enhancing her understanding of local community organizations and hopes to become involved in some of the issues they are committed to. MHC is delighted by the work that Gina has already accomplished with the recent race and lending forum and in planning the 2009 Annual Meeting!
