Fair and Affordable Housing Includes Environmental Issues

MHC’s definition of fair and affordable housing includes living in a home that is weatherized and able to capitalize on savings in utility usage to make it affordable and sustainable for the household. It includes safe air, water and soil. It includes the ability to easily connect to all parts of the city through public transit. It also includes the ability to participate in the community, especially in planning and policy decisions.

This month we are updating you on efforts that fit under environmental issues.

- MHC will release the 2011 State of Metropolitan Housing Report on October 27, 2011 at noon at New Directions Housing Corporation, 1000 East Liberty Street, Louisville. The focus of the report is on the built and natural environment and the role it plays in fair and affordable housing. Once again, the University of Louisville Center for Environmental Policy and Management has worked with MHC to get the newest data, best practices and policies all in one document.

- In last month’s newsletter, we wrote extensively on the two cases before the Kentucky Public Service Commission (PSC) that will affect the costs of utilities- LG&E/KU’s proposed changes to their Demand Side Management (DSM) program and their proposed surcharge to cover costs necessary to comply with environmental regulations. With the legal assistance of Kentucky Resources Council (www.kyrc.org), MHC is an “Intervenor” before the PSC in both cases.

- A public hearing was held on September 6 in Louisville on the proposed Environmental Surcharge rates. People are frightened of what such a large hike in costs will mean to them, but also want the quality of life improvements we’ll receive through cleaner air, water and soil that the environmental regulations will bring. Speakers at the hearing stated concerns about the impacts of the rate increases on low- and fixed-income households, and they spoke of the need to better integrate energy-efficiency measures and alternative, renewable energy sources into long-term planning for environmental compliance. You can make your voice heard by submitting your own comments to the PSC by November 10.

Submit your public comments by email to psc.info@ky.gov, by fax to 502-564-9625, or by US Mail to Kentucky Public Service Commission, PO Box 615, Frankfort, KY 40602.

- The Louisville Metro Planning and Design Department (P&D) has taken on several big tasks. One was a review of how P&D processes could make things easier for those who want to know what is going on in their neighborhood and for residents and developers to have good dialogue and a more clear process. Former MHC board members Barbara Sinai and Gabe Fritz served on the non-governmental review body, as did many partners of MHC. The outcomes are being finalized but offer some good solutions that can improve P&D services.

- Also, the time to review the Louisville Metro Land Development Code (LDC) is fast approaching and we will keep you informed and ready to contribute to the discussion. In anticipation of this process, P&D is coordinating many partners (MHC included) in a grant application to the US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to implement the changes resulting from an update to the LDC in Louisville. The sustainable communities grant promotes fair and affordable housing as well as public transit, sustainable growth and input by historically marginalized populations.

- Speaking of which, HUD is also requesting proposals for regional sustainability grants. KIPDA is coordinating the grant application for our region. Ironically, given the public input goals of HUD’s program, some of KIPDA’s practices effectively bar public participation, especially for those that rely on public transit. For example, KIPDA’s Transportation Policy Committee (TPC) meetings are most frequently held at 1:00 p.m. on a weekday at Commonwealth Drive- a location where there is no ability for anyone using public transit to easily attend. (Unless one were to leave downtown at about 6:00 a.m., take three buses and arrive three hours early.) Nor are these meetings broadcast. KIPDA should be encouraged to hold its meetings at times and locations that are more accessible.

Louisville Metro Appoints the Leader of the New Vacant Abandoned Properties Initiative

Louisville Metro Government has announced the creation of the Vacant Abandoned Properties Initiative, which resulted, in part, from recommendations made at the April 28, 2011 Vacant and Abandoned Property Summit. The Summit brought together over 200 people representing local governments, developers, neighborhood associations, and community activists to discuss how to address Louisville’s growing vacant property crisis and strategies to encourage re-use and redevelopment of vacant properties.

Mary McGuire has been appointed the Team Leader of the Vacant Abandoned Properties Initiative. MHC and the Louisville Vacant Properties Campaign (LVPC) would like to introduce Ms. McGuire to our membership, as she will become a valuable partner as we work as a community to address our vacant property problem. Ms. McGuire graciously provided MHC with the following description of herself and her work.

I am a native of Louisville. I have a B.A. in Political Science from the University of Evansville. I received a J.D. from the University of Notre Dame, including one year of international law study in London. I have practiced general civil law in Illinois and Kentucky, including commercial law and real estate law.

My first duty as head of the Vacant Abandoned Properties Initiative has been to assemble a team from different departments and across government local-state lines in order to coordinate our efforts. Going forward, we are hoping to work cooperatively with each other and with outside agencies to address this growing problem.

Our three leading principles are: Advocacy and Compassion; Consistent, Steady and Actionable Progress; and Research, Redevelopment and Recovery. One of our primary goals is to lessen the number of new abandoned properties. This will require a strong partnership with outside agencies to keep people in their homes. Many of these agencies have been working for years on this issue, but I’m hoping this initiative will offer people a new resource to help them connect with these agencies.

We will also be pursuing strategic foreclosures based upon the potential for new development. The ultimate goal is to return as many of these properties as possible to productive uses, for the individuals, the neighborhoods and for Metro Louisville as a whole.

Keep an eye on the Department of Inspections, Permits, and Licenses website http://www.louisvilleky.gov/ipl, for more news about the Vacant Abandoned Properties Initiative.

The Louisville Rx Housing Campaign- Volunteers and Contributions Needed

Under the leadership of the Coalition for the Homeless, Louisville is going to become a part of the national 100,000 Homes Campaign. The 100,000 Homes Campaign focuses on identifying and housing those individuals and families who remain trapped in homelessness and dependent on costly emergency services. The Campaign aims to bring together organizations and activists from across the country to find and house 100,000 of the most vulnerable and long-term homeless individuals and families over the next three years. (For more information on the campaign, go to http://100khomes.org). The Coalition for the Homeless needs volunteers for their local 100,000 Homes initiative, called Rx Housing, which is a prescription to house the 50 people most likely to die on the streets of Metro Louisville.

On September 19, 20, and 21, the Coalition for the Homeless seeks 100 volunteers for a three-day registry of homeless people, for which teams of four will conduct early morning interviews with those living on the street. These interviews will be used to identify those in greatest need and access housing to get them off the street. The Coalition asks that you consider volunteering for the three-day early morning event and Sunday training. If you cannot commit to all three days but would still like to volunteer, the Coalition for the Homeless will find other opportunities for you to help with set up, clean up, data entry, etc.

The Coalition for the Homeless also requests donations of the following items they need for the Rx Housing registry.

- Pizza, soda and paper goods for the Sunday training
- Breakfast items for all three registry days
- Bottled water
- Breakfast or granola bars
- Cash or gift cards to purchase items for those moving into apartments
- Pens
- Copy services for the volunteer information
- Flashlights with batteries
- T-shirts and printing for the volunteers
- Disposable cameras
- New socks and underwear

To volunteer, make a donation, or get further information, please contact Natalie Harris at 502-636-9550, ext. 11 or nharris@louhomeless.org.
